

GET CREATIVE WITH SPRAY FOAM: SPOOKY USES FOR HALLOWEEN

Posted on October 12, 2021 by Versi-Foam

Category: Arts and Crafts

It's time to get creative with your leftover spray foam this year! While Versi-Foam® insulation is classically used for both residential and commercial projects, did you know it can also be used for arts and crafts? From skulls and bones to cauldrons and costumes, here are five different spooky uses for spray foam this Halloween season.

Spooky spray foam ideas for Halloween

1. Creepy woodland tree trunks

Perfect for a backyard haunted house or Halloween display, making spray foam tree trunks to decorate with couldn't be easier. YouTube user Van Oaks Props takes you through how to make these stumps step by step.

2. Skulls and other scary body parts

As another form of decoration, you'll see many houses adorned with random arms and legs sticking out of the ground, a bush, a door, and more. Why not make your own this year? YouTube user Stiltbeast Studio shows you how to make a full skeleton, including arms, ribs, legs, and other body parts, in an easy and inexpensive way with spray foam.

3. A witch's cauldron

Set the scene for your children to prepare potions and chant spells right from their very own witch's cauldron. Once night falls, your cauldron will look like there's a real fire underneath it, thanks to some craftily placed string lights in this unique idea by YouTube user Monster Tutorials.

4. Budget-friendly Halloween mask

For less than $10 worth of materials, you can have a killer homemade costume idea that doesn't require any sewing skills. YouTube user Stiltbeast Studios is back to show you how to make a far-from-average skull mask, complete with terrifying teeth (made from hot glue droplets!) sure to scare all of your neighbors.

5. Classic pumpkins

If you prefer your Halloween slightly less spooky, give these spray foam pumpkins a try! Using a couple of different materials, including a beach ball and some fabric, this 24-inch pumpkin project is another video by YouTube user Stiltbeast Studios, who specializes in how-to videos on unique decorations.

Ready to make some Halloween decorations? Find your nearest Versi-Foam® distributor to purchase some spray foam today!

There are no comments yet.